Compliance in the era of digital transformation

DID YOU KNOW?

For the majority of organizations, growing compliance obligations are now consuming or more of IT security budgets and threaten to become an unsustainable cost.

4.0%

The incredible resource load just to maintain status quo for larger organizations can exceed 10,000 hours for each compliance obligation they carry.

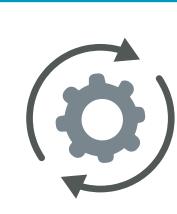

Compliance is already a significant barrier to business opportunities.

of companies now view compliance as a material barrier to entering new markets.

With the current status quo, there is no light at the end of the tunnel.

Organizations that deploy innovative approaches get the best results.

Automation

Aggressively shift security and compliance strategies and invest heavily in security automation to centralize and simplify compliance.

Compliance as a security enabler Implement continuous monitoring tools, processes, and dashboards to improve security outcomes and push compliance requirements toward broader security goals.

Coordinated assessment Coordinate compliance efforts with auditors and focus on alternative, lowest-impact-feasible assessment timelines.

Turn security from a cost to a point of market differentiation wherever possible.

Market differentiation

Business alignment Provide more effective reporting to boards of directors and stakeholder groups, giving executives visibility into detailed compliance metrics and explicitly linking security investments with business objectives.

Positive impacts are possible.

approaches, some organizations report

After evolving and adjusting to the innovative savings in internal compliance resource requirements.

This Securealities data visualization represents findings from a recent market research study conducted in partnership with Omdia.

as 33% improvement in pipeline conversions.

compliance and security postures are seeing as much

Let us show you how transforming compliance into an efficient and empowering program with assessment coordination, automation, and ongoing visibility fuels success.